"Rain Down the Stormdrain!" Help Prevent Cameron Run Pollution

Huntington

Did you know that the water that goes down the storm drain on Huntington streets flow right into Cameron Run? Polluted rainwater is the nation's number one water quality problem, and you can help do something about it! This March and April, Fairfax County joined other Northern Virginia localities in a water pollution prevention campaign to educate residents about how common household waste and chemicals can contaminate local streams.

1. Dispose of used motor oil and household hazardous waste (paint, batteries, household cleaners, etc.) properly through the Household Hazardous Waste program
2. Avoid excess fertilizer or pesticide use, especially before rain is predicted
3. Wash your car at a commercial carwash, or in a location where the soapy water will not run into the storm drain
4. Sweep up dirt, grass clippings, and other yard waste instead of washing them down the driveway and into the gutter
5. Always pick up pet waste from your yard, sidewalk, or park area.

The campaign is coordinated by the Northern Virginia Regional Commission. Campaign partners included Arlington County, Alexandria, Fairfax County, Prince William County, Loudoun County, Fairfax City, the City of Falls Church, the town of Herndon, the town of Vienna, Fairfax Water, and the Loudoun County Sanitation Authority (LCSA).

For more information about preventing stormwater pollution, please check the campaign web site at <http://www.onlyrain.org> or contact Fred Rose with Fairfax County by email or by phone at 703-324-5500.

You can also get involved by participating in the stormdrain education program sponsored by the Northern Virginia Soil & Water Conservation District. As part of this program, you volunteer to place colored labels on the storm drains in your community and educate your friends and neighbors about water pollution, and how to prevent it!

Stop Sign Violations Put Huntington Residents at Risk

Are you one of the drivers who fail to stop at stop signs in the Huntington Community? Some residents continue to ignore the stops signs at the intersections of Farrington Ave at Mount Vernon Drive and at Liberty Drive, which not only puts other drivers at risk but pedestrians and children as well. Both of these intersections are school bus stops. One of the attractions of living in Huntington is that it is a “walkable” community. Please keep Huntington safe for our residents and children and drive carefully.

UPDATES & REMINDERS:

- The Huntington Car Care, on Huntington Avenue, has withdrawn their Special Exemption Application to add a gas station at their business.
- Huntington Avenue and Richmond Highway Construction - The contractor schedule indicates opening of the widened Huntington Avenue to traffic by end of March barring unforeseen (subsurface) conditions and weather limitations.
